ABSTRACT

The article tackles the main issues related to the strategic planning approached thru a conceptual level and refers to the importance of the doctrine definition in the area of public order and national security. In Romania, the national system of public order and safety includes the assembly consisting of legislation, authorities and public administration bodies, institutions, forces and resources specially created and prepared acting in order to guarantee the citizens rights and freedoms, protection of public and private property, and for normal functioning of the rule of law. In this respect, and taking into account that the society is in a constantly evolution and dynamic, and the challenges are always different, the system of national order and security, through its institutions, must adapt their instruments and conduct them so that to ensure the climate of national safety and the policies adaptation and resources management in an efficient way to be achieved just by a good multi-institutional coordination and a multidisciplinary and multidimensional approaching of the system.
