ABSTRACT

The following article presents the cruel reality about how people become criminals, a short presentation about the factors that make people commit criminal acts, and why this phenomenon cannot be prevented. The most important problems are presented in the content. A felon is that person who has committed a crime or has been legally convicted of a crime. People might call them criminals, crooks, malefactors, even outlaws. In today's world, one of the biggest problems human kind encounters is combating the criminal acts different types of people commit. The struggle to stop criminals committing acts of crime is the first step in creating a better and safer world we could live in. But the question this article rises you is why shouldn't we dig deeper in solving the criminal behavior problem our world seems to struggle in.
